

Jason Henry, M.D.

Hometown: Minneapolis, MN

Undergraduate: University of Minnesota

Medical School: University of North Dakota

Residency: University of Colorado

What are your career goals?

To be a great clinician and clinical investigator.

Why did you choose MD Anderson?

MD Anderson allows for unparalleled clinical experience with world class research. I value opportunities to learn from some of the most expert faculty in the entire world, but also have your own patient panel at LBJ that allows for autonomy and development of your own clinical style.

How has MD Anderson helped you in achieving your goals?

I've only been at MD Anderson for a short period, but thus far I am very impressed with my clinical training. The faculty I have met so far have all been excited to work with fellows and are always willing to spend time teaching. I have also had the opportunity to become involved in research projects. The faculty I have worked with thus far are always available to assist with study design, but also urge fellows to have input in order to build expertise.

What do you like best about MD Anderson's fellowship program?

The program's primary focus is on helping fellows achieve their goals. There are limitless opportunities and the program is always eager to help. All you have to do is ask!

What do you like about living in Houston?

Having grown up mostly in cooler climates, I'm loving the warmer weather

What has surprised you most about living in Houston?

I've been surprised by how nice the public parks are.

What do you like to do outside of medicine?

I love playing golf, going for runs with my dog and checking out the food scene with my fiancé.